CALL FOR PAPERS

MEDICINE AND CHARITY IN HISTORY

A WORKSHOP FOR POSTGRADUATES AND EARLY CAREER RESEARCHERS

Oxford Brookes University, 21st February 2009

The morning will feature papers given by postgraduate and early career researchers on problems and issues they have come across in their work, raising questions for discussion rather than presenting findings. An afternoon roundtable led by Professors Anne Digby and Steven King will provide a supportive environment to discuss those issues raised in the morning.

Call for papers: abstracts of 3-500 words should be emailed to Chris Moores at CIM305@bham.ac.uk by 31st December 2008. Submissions covering medicine and charity in any period or place will be considered, and those on the medieval and early modern periods and non-British history will be especially welcome.

If you wish to attend to hear the papers and participate in the discussion, you should email Chris Moores at CIM305@bham.ac.uk by 10th February 2009.

A limited number of travel bursaries will be available to facilitate attendance. These must be agreed in advance.

There will be a £10 registration fee.

This is a one-day workshop organised by the postgraduate sub-committee of the Voluntary Action History Society. For more information see www.vaahs.org.uk
