Writing the History of the Global: Challenges for the 21st Century

Conference at the British Academy
21-22 May, 2009

10 Carlton House Terrace, London SW1

2009 marks a period of approximately ten years of new historical writing which has come to be termed 'global history'. This conference provides an opportunity to discuss what a 'global' approach to history means to historians, and how it has changed the ways they do history. It opens debates on new perspectives from 'divergence' to 'connectedness', and addresses methodological issues of language and expertise. The conference also engages with ways that global history now informs a wider public agenda in international policy and in the arts and culture.

Speakers include:

Glenn Adamson, David Arnold, Christopher Bayly, Maxine Berg, Tim Brook, Linda Colley, William Gervase Clarence Smith, Craig Clunas, Diogo Ramada Curto, John Darwin, Jan de Vries, Anne Gerritsen, Jack Goldstone, JD Hill, Luca Molà, Patrick O'Brien, Prasannan Parthasarathi, Sevket Pamuk, Ken Pomeranz, Kapil Raj, Giorgio Riello, Lissa Roberts, Dagmar Schäfer, Simon Schaffer, Jean-Frédéric Schaub, Sanjay Subrahmanyam, Billy K. L. So, Kaoru Sugihara, Nigel Thrift, Jan-Luiten Van Zanden, Peer Vries, David Washbrook, R. Bin Wong.
